WHAT IS A LIVERY HALL & WHY IS IT SO SPECIAL?

A livery hall was traditionally the headquarters of a livery company in the City of London, where members met to regulate trades, set industry standards and hold ceremonies. These halls were central to the guilds' influence in medieval London, hosting significant civic and religious events. Today, livery halls serve more symbolic and ceremonial roles, acting as venues for formal banquets, charitable functions, and public gatherings. While livery companies no longer regulate trades, their focus has shifted to philanthropy, education and networking, with their halls preserving a deep connection to London's heritage.

Innholders' Hall honours its heritage and traditions while creating unforgettable new experiences for our guests.
